

“Here they are, idolising a man who wreaked havoc on our country”

o o o

Hero of that other Malta: here he is with North Korean despot Kim Il Sung.

This excellent comment is from timesofmalta.com's comments-board.

Lesley Darmanin

Today (Thursday), 17:12

All this show in the streets goes to prove that despite all that Malta went through in the 70s and 80s under the despotic rule of Labour, we have learnt nothing.

No wonder the PN only managed to scrape through the 1987 elections, despite those atrocious years of KMB. Labour will always be Labour.

And here they are idolising a man who wreaked havoc on our country, destroyed thousands of lives and made an international mockery of Malta.

These Labour supporters have not changed. They are still there, clamouring for this man who bought their votes through handouts and favours.

If they had their way, they would like to have it all back again, just like it was under those degenerate Labour administrations.

It is sad, very sad to see such scenes. And what is more, a very sad future lies ahead for Malta come the next election.

It leaves you with such an empty feeling that such a large portion of the Maltese population continues to support, even glorify, the very person who trampled on our rights, on our livelihood, on our very dignity.

How very very sad, and worrying.

o o o